One summer day my family, our dog and I decided to have a picnic in a countryside, with breathtaking views around us. Having equipped with tents and blankets, we got into the car and drove. Little did we know we were in for a bizarre adventure...

The road to the place we had picked was rather challenging but we managed to overcome the obstacles and found ourselves on a field surrounded by forests and mountains. Our dog started to bark because, I believe, he found the fresh air bewildering.

"I reckon you enjoy the view, ~~but~~?" exclaimed my father after noticing my wide-open mouth.

"Yeah, it's fascinating!"

No sooner had the sky turned purple and the sun started to go down, the temperature dropped and it became freezing. Despite being covered with a blanket and wearing a sweater, my mother insisted on our going back home. With his striped beanie and blue jacket nighted, ~~the~~ Dad agreed happily.

As soon as we got into the car, I felt embarrassed, as if I'd forgotten something important. Since nobody noticed, I didn't pay much attention to the feeling, only to realise later that my best friend, our dog Barnes, was left behind.

"We're so ignorant!" I cried hours later, "How could we forget about him!"

Only a year later found but the reunion made me realise how important of a role animals play in our lives. I would never let Barnes go again, not until his last breath.
