It was a trip I'll never forget. It all began on one sunny Saturday. My parents and I set off on a family trip, to which we had been looking forward for months. We were full of beans and excited to explore our country travelling by car.

The first (and the last) part of our 'adventure' was quite challenging, because my mother not being accustomed to long-distance trips, felt sick. Although my father has always been an experienced driver, he chose rather bizarre route: through forests hills and etc. Even now I feel confused and often ask him: 'Dad, why ~~re~~ did we go that particular way?' and he still has now answer. So, back to our trip, my mom felt completely fed up with all road holes we had encountered and threatened to dad: 'If you do not push the brakes now, I swear to God I'll do it myself!'. Due to the fact my father was ignorant of any other ways of making mother feel better, we made a stop to have a picnic. It was one of the most peaceful moments of our trip: we were sitting on the grass, joking, feeling over the moon to be together. My mother was smiling, she looked as if she did not even know what 'being sick' means. Father was also in high spirits, until...

We noticed our car was no longer near us, it was going down the road. We looked at each other in terror. Father immediately jumped on his feet and rushed after the car. But it was too late. Our car made its last stop in the lake at the end of the road. To say that we were devastated is to say nothing. What were we supposed to do?
